

Monday 6th December 2021

As we get nearer to the Christmas break, there is still lots going on in the school. The Languages department have been running both an International Bake Off as well as a Christmas card competition, there is still time to enter the Christmas Card competition entries due in by Wednesday.

The Art and Design Technology have been involved in making decorations for the Stowmarket Christmas Tree Festival, do have a look at the photographs on the school website and on Twitter for both the Bake Off and the Christmas Tree festivals.

This week is Computer Science Education Week and Mr Geronimo has taken on our House Quiz this week which students will compete in (electronically) on Friday.

In the whole school assembly this week we will talk to students about the plight of some of the migrants who sadly lost their lives crossing the channel two weeks ago. This is part of a series of assemblies where we are encouraging students to “walk in the shoes of others” to help us all understand and empathise with the plight of others.

As you will be aware we took the decision last week to increase our response to Covid, I am pleased to say that the bulge in numbers we experienced has dropped off to more normal levels. There are still a handful of cases in school but we will continue to monitor this week and let parents know any further measures we plan to take.

With warmest wishes

Simon Martin
